

Camagüey, Apr 17.- Guaranteed protection against COVID 19 has in Camagüey about sixty people who remain in the Provincial Social Protection Center that welcomes citizens with wandering behavior.

Ivet González Penichet, director of that institution, that although several were transferred by government and Public Health authorities, others came of their own free will in search of shelter from the current epidemiological situation.

Doctor Félix Garriga, in charge of medical care, reported that, after their arrival, each of these people was dispensed as established and both the workers and the rapid test were applied to detect the new coronavirus and all were tested negatives.

With gratitude, Gerardo Saavedra, one of the Camagüeyans welcomed at the Social Protection Center, expressed that he feels safe there and described the care he receives there as perfect. (Text: Yamylé Fernández) (Photos: Raúl Hernández Piña / Communication Group of the Provincial Government)
